

Are you a teacher trainer?

Become the driving force in the recognition of learning outcomes of individual pupil mobility programmes!

In the majority of EU countries, teachers are the ones responsible for the recognition of learning outcomes of any period abroad of up to a full school year.

Therefore, developing teachers' skills in defining and assessing the competencies gained by pupils during their time abroad – broadly in line with the curriculum of the sending school – is the key for enabling and promoting pupil mobility at secondary school level!

What can you do in order to contribute to the process of increasing the number of recognised learning periods abroad?
